Sometimes it's hard to imagine the size of this great country. Traveling here is like traveling no ther place on earth. There are 58o6,000 square miles here, about one fifth the size of the continental U.S. and twice the size of Alasaka.The roads allow for easy access to most of the great things to see in this great land.

Many major airlines travel in and out of Anchorage -the main transportation air hub. Alaska airlines is the main carrier for travel within the state and offer frequent, sometimes hourly, trip into and out of the state. Small plane or jet boat operators are used to reach more remote areas. The Alaska Marine Highway also is used to travel between many of our coastal communities.

Remember Alaskan time zone is one hour later the Pacific Time.
